

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICES OF OVERVIEW AND SCRUTINY5 June 2007*Convenor: Colin Copus*Venue: Birmingham

Overview and scrutiny is potentially the most exciting and influential set of processes for members and officers and provides members with opportunities to initiate, develop and direct the policy of the council. Yet, to achieve this potential, an entirely new set of principles and approaches are required to that necessary when working under the old committee system.

The seminar explores how overview and scrutiny provides members with a powerful policy role and with the tools necessary to influence and direct the activities of the council – as well as the exciting potential for scrutiny of the activities of a range of public and private sector agencies and bodies.

The seminar is run by Dr Colin Copus, one of the co-authors of the ODPM report The Development of Overview and Scrutiny in Local Government.

Programme Objectives

- Consider ways to develop an effective overview and scrutiny process
- Explore various ways of conducting overview and scrutiny reviews
- Provide a framework for good working relationships between the executive and overview and scrutiny

The seminar aims to equip Members and Officers with the skills necessary to develop and achieve the full potential offered by overview and scrutiny.
